

短文 1 访华教育代表团团长在中外青年教育对话开幕式上的讲话（节选）

演讲·开幕致辞（原创仿写，人物与数据均为虚构） · 400 词

听力记忆填空：教师（或录音）朗读两遍，学生边听边记，再凭记忆在横线上补全空缺的内容（每空 3–8 个词），最后对照答案页订正。

Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I want to thank Minister Zhao and Vice Minister Liu for (1) _____. It is a great pleasure for our whole delegation to be here in Hangzhou. And it is also an honor to stand beside my colleague, Dr. Miller, and the many teachers, scientists and students who have (2) _____.

I first came to China in 1998 as a young exchange student, and I have been lucky to return many times since. Every visit gives me fresh pictures of (3) _____. Back in 1998, the number of students moving between our two countries was measured in the thousands. Today it is counted in (4) _____. Few classrooms back then had computers, and almost no student had an email address. Today (5) _____, and a single click can bring a lecture from the other side of the world into a village school. Last night, a student from Chengdu told me she is learning to write software so that she can help doctors in her hometown. Her dream is, I think, a dream that all of us in this room share, whatever our passports say.

Now, we all know that a few days of meetings will not solve every problem in education. But we can (6) _____ for learning from each other. We will not agree on every question. But we will talk about them openly, as friends and partners do.

There is a Chinese saying that a journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. Our two countries began from very different places. China is home to (7) _____, and this morning I saw children in the old town still bow to their teachers before class. My country is (8) _____, and it has always learned from every corner of the world. But we know that our future, both (9) _____, will be shared.

We have walked along different roads, but that shared future is our common destination and our common duty. And, in the end, that is what this dialogue is about.

So, again, let me thank Minister Zhao and Vice Minister Liu, and I look forward to (10) _____. Thank you very much.

短文 2 天坛

介绍·事物介绍类 (体裁参照听力第 2 套, 内容原创) · 400 词

听力记忆填空: 教师 (或录音) 朗读两遍, 学生边听边记, 再凭记忆在横线上补全空缺的内容 (每空 3-8 个词), 最后对照答案页订正。

Good afternoon, everyone. Today I'd like to take you to (1)

_____ : the Temple of Heaven. It stands in the south of the city and covers about (2) _____, which is much larger than the Forbidden City.

The temple has a long history. It was built in 1420, (3) _____. For nearly five hundred years, emperors came here every year to (4) _____. They believed that heaven would send just the right amount of rain and sunshine, so that farmers could grow enough food for everyone. On the shortest day of winter, the emperor would walk to the Circular Mound, a three-level white stone altar, and make his offering under the open sky, with music, incense and many officials following him.

The most famous building is the Hall of Prayer for Good Harvests. It has (5) _____ with three layers, and its tall, strong wooden columns hold up the whole hall. The shapes of the buildings also carry meaning. The round roof stands for heaven, and the square walls around it stand for (6) _____. In this way, the design shows the old Chinese idea that heaven and earth belong together.

Another favourite place is the Echo Wall. If you whisper to the wall from one end, a friend (7) _____ can hear your voice clearly. Visitors, especially young children, love to try it again and again.

The Temple of Heaven is also a treasure for the whole world. In 1998, it was added to (8) _____, and since then, visitors from many countries have come to admire its beauty and its careful design.

Today, the park is not only a place for tourists. It is also part of daily life. Early in the morning, local residents (9) _____ among the old cypress trees. Some practise tai chi, some play chess, and some simply sit and chat with their friends. In spring, the trees turn green, and in autumn, golden leaves fall softly on the old stone paths, so every season has its own charm.

If you ever visit Beijing, I hope you will (10) _____ and join them. You will see an ancient place that is still full of life and energy. Thank you all very much for listening.

短文 3 让北京的天空重新变蓝

说明·问题—措施类（体裁参照听力第 3 套，内容原创） · 400 词

听力记忆填空：教师（或录音）朗读两遍，学生边听边记，再凭记忆在横线上补全空缺的内容（每空 3–8 个词），最后对照答案页订正。

Hello, everyone. Many people remember a time when winter days in Beijing were grey, and (1) _____. Today I'd like to tell you how our city has been fighting for cleaner air, and what we can do to help.

First, let's look at the problem. Smog is made of tiny particles in the air, and these particles can (2) _____. In Beijing, they came from several sources: coal burned for heating, smoke from factories, exhaust from cars and lorries, and (3) _____. On the worst days, schools closed, flights were delayed, and people stayed indoors with their windows tightly shut.

Fortunately, the city has taken strong action. First, it changed the way people heat their homes. Millions of families (4) _____ and switched to natural gas or electricity. Second, many old factories were closed or moved out of the city. Third, the city began to (5) _____ and encouraged people to buy electric ones. Today, many buses and taxis run on electricity, and the subway keeps (6) _____. Fourth, the city has planted millions of trees and built new parks, because green areas can (7) _____. Fifth, builders were told to cover their sites and water the roads, so that less dust flew into the air.

These measures have worked. Over the past ten years, the amount of tiny particles in the air has fallen by more than half, and the number of blue-sky days has (8) _____. On a clear morning, many residents now enjoy (9) _____, and children can play outside without worrying about the air. Every day, the city publishes air quality data, so anyone can check the numbers on a phone before going out. I have lived here for twenty years, and I never thought I would see the hills so clearly again.

But the work is not finished. Clean air depends on all of us. You can help in simple ways: (10) _____ instead of asking for a lift, turn off the lights when you leave a room, and never burn rubbish. Small actions, repeated by millions of people, can make a big difference.

Let's keep working together, so that our grandchildren will grow up under a blue sky. Thank you for listening.

短文 1 参考答案 访华教育代表团团长在中外青年教育对话开幕式上的讲话（节选）

1	their generous welcome and warm hospitality	6	start building a framework
2	travelled thousands of miles to join this dialogue	7	an ancient tradition of respecting teachers
3	a country that never stops changing	8	a young nation built by newcomers
4	the hundreds of thousands	9	its problems and its possibilities
5	nearly every student carries a smartphone	10	three days of open and friendly discussion

Good morning, ladies and gentlemen. I want to thank Minister Zhao and Vice Minister Liu for (1)their generous welcome and warm hospitality. It is a great pleasure for our whole delegation to be here in Hangzhou. And it is also an honor to stand beside my colleague, Dr. Miller, and the many teachers, scientists and students who have (2)travelled thousands of miles to join this dialogue.

I first came to China in 1998 as a young exchange student, and I have been lucky to return many times since. Every visit gives me fresh pictures of (3)a country that never stops changing. Back in 1998, the number of students moving between our two countries was measured in the thousands. Today it is counted in (4)the hundreds of thousands. Few classrooms back then had computers, and almost no student had an email address. Today (5)nearly every student carries a smartphone, and a single click can bring a lecture from the other side of the world into a village school. Last night, a student from Chengdu told me she is learning to write software so that she can help doctors in her hometown. Her dream is, I think, a dream that all of us in this room share, whatever our passports say.

Now, we all know that a few days of meetings will not solve every problem in education. But we can (6)start building a framework for learning from each other. We will not agree on every question. But we will talk about them openly, as friends and partners do.

There is a Chinese saying that a journey of a thousand miles begins with a single step. Our two countries began from very different places. China is home to (7)an ancient tradition of respecting teachers, and this morning I saw children in the old town still bow to their teachers before class. My country is (8)a young nation built by newcomers, and it has always learned from every corner of the world. But we know that our future, both (9)its problems and its possibilities, will be shared.

We have walked along different roads, but that shared future is our common destination and our common duty. And, in the end, that is what this dialogue is about.

So, again, let me thank Minister Zhao and Vice Minister Liu, and I look forward to (10)three days of open and friendly discussion. Thank you very much.

词汇：delegation 代表团 hospitality 好客，款待 exchange student 交换生 framework 框架 proverb / saying 谚语 destination 目的地 common duty 共同的责任 possibilities 可能性，机遇

短文 2 参考答案 天坛

1	one of the most famous parks in Beijing	6	the earth below
2	two hundred and seventy hectares	7	standing at the other end
3	during the Ming dynasty	8	the UNESCO World Heritage List
4	pray for a good harvest	9	come to exercise, sing and dance
5	a round blue roof	10	come early in the morning

Good afternoon, everyone. Today I'd like to take you to (1)one of the most famous parks in Beijing: the Temple of Heaven. It stands in the south of the city and covers about (2)two hundred and seventy hectares, which is much larger than the Forbidden City.

The temple has a long history. It was built in 1420, (3)during the Ming dynasty. For nearly five hundred years, emperors came here every year to (4)pray for a good harvest. They believed that heaven would send just the right amount of rain and sunshine, so that farmers could grow enough food for everyone. On the shortest day of winter, the emperor would walk to the Circular Mound, a three-level white stone altar, and make his offering under the open sky, with music, incense and many officials following him.

The most famous building is the Hall of Prayer for Good Harvests. It has (5)a round blue roof with three layers, and its tall, strong wooden columns hold up the whole hall. The shapes of the buildings also carry meaning. The round roof stands for heaven, and the square walls around it stand for (6)the earth below. In this way, the design shows the old Chinese idea that heaven and earth belong together.

Another favourite place is the Echo Wall. If you whisper to the wall from one end, a friend (7)standing at the other end can hear your voice clearly. Visitors, especially young children, love to try it again and again.

The Temple of Heaven is also a treasure for the whole world. In 1998, it was added to (8)the UNESCO World Heritage List, and since then, visitors from many countries have come to admire its beauty and its careful design.

Today, the park is not only a place for tourists. It is also part of daily life. Early in the morning, local residents (9)come to exercise, sing and dance among the old cypress trees. Some practise tai chi, some play chess, and some simply sit and chat with their friends. In spring, the trees turn green, and in autumn, golden leaves fall softly on the old stone paths, so every season has its own charm.

If you ever visit Beijing, I hope you will (10)come early in the morning and join them. You will see an ancient place that is still full of life and energy. Thank you all very much for listening.

词汇：harvest 收成 hectare 公顷 dynasty 朝代 hall 殿，厅 column 柱子 echo 回声 cypress 柏树 World Heritage List 世界遗产名录

短文 3 参考答案 让北京的天空重新变蓝

1	the sky was hidden by thick smog	6	growing longer every year
2	harm our lungs and hearts	7	catch dust and clean the air
3	dust from building sites	8	risen year after year
4	stopped burning coal	9	a beautiful view of the Western Hills
5	control the number of cars	10	take the subway or ride a bike

Hello, everyone. Many people remember a time when winter days in Beijing were grey, and (1)the sky was hidden by thick smog. Today I'd like to tell you how our city has been fighting for cleaner air, and what we can do to help.

First, let's look at the problem. Smog is made of tiny particles in the air, and these particles can (2)harm our lungs and hearts. In Beijing, they came from several sources: coal burned for heating, smoke from factories, exhaust from cars and lorries, and (3)dust from building sites. On the worst days, schools closed, flights were delayed, and people stayed indoors with their windows tightly shut.

Fortunately, the city has taken strong action. First, it changed the way people heat their homes. Millions of families (4)stopped burning coal and switched to natural gas or electricity. Second, many old factories were closed or moved out of the city. Third, the city began to (5)control the number of cars and encouraged people to buy electric ones. Today, many buses and taxis run on electricity, and the subway keeps (6)growing longer every year. Fourth, the city has planted millions of trees and built new parks, because green areas can (7)catch dust and clean the air. Fifth, builders were told to cover their sites and water the roads, so that less dust flew into the air.

These measures have worked. Over the past ten years, the amount of tiny particles in the air has fallen by more than half, and the number of blue-sky days has (8)risen year after year. On a clear morning, many residents now enjoy (9)a beautiful view of the Western Hills, and children can play outside without worrying about the air. Every day, the city publishes air quality data, so anyone can check the numbers on a phone before going out. I have lived here for twenty years, and I never thought I would see the hills so clearly again.

But the work is not finished. Clean air depends on all of us. You can help in simple ways: (10)take the subway or ride a bike instead of asking for a lift, turn off the lights when you leave a room, and never burn rubbish. Small actions, repeated by millions of people, can make a big difference.

Let's keep working together, so that our grandchildren will grow up under a blue sky. Thank you for listening.

词汇：smog 雾霾 particle 颗粒物 exhaust 尾气 lorry 卡车 natural gas 天然气 subway 地铁 measure 措施 difference 差别，影响